

LIGHTING SYSTEM OF CITY TO BE IMPROVED RESULT OF CHANGES

At the meeting of the City Council last Monday night, all members were present and Mayor H. H. Smith presided.

Several protests were heard from property owners in the assessed district formed for the improvement of Knowles avenue and cross streets. As these protests were pointed out by the city attorney to be of a legal nature, the Council accepted the assessment as formed.

City Engineer Kneese explained that the work would cost those in the district not directly facing the pavement $6.28, instead of $6.50, as at first estimated.

The light committee made known the following new lights to be installed and changed: New light on Frankfort between Oliver and Acton streets. Light moved from Acton and Frankfort streets to Templeton, 150 feet above Alexander. Light on the southwest corner of Hillcrest and Mission Circle. Light in center of block on Mission Circle between Hillcrest Drive and Bepler.

These lights and changes are for a better lighting system in Daly City.

Several requests for poles in the Vista Grande district were made by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, and after being investigated by the board, the same was granted.

The city engineer was instructed to look into the matter of making the alley running between Frankfort and Alexander streets, from Templeton avenue to Roosevelt, a one way street. This being the only way of reaching the garages of the houses on Frankfort street, it is thought by the council that if autos enter at Templeton avenue this will remedy a condition that now exists.

Mr. Race of the construction company that paved Knowles avenue and cross streets was present, and explained that the assessments can be paid in thirty days on the work now completed, or the same will go to bonds and can be paid off in ten yearly payments, with interest, with the first payment on next year's taxes.

The city clerk was instructed to write Mr. A. McSweeney, the county tax collector, and ask him to collect the county taxes in the City Hall hereafter, instead of the bank.

INTERESTING MEETING OF P. T. A. MEMBERS

The Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande Parent-Teachers' Association held a very interesting meeting at the Vista Grande school on Tuesday afternoon. The principal speakers on this occasion were Mrs. Owens, president of the Seventeenth district, and Mrs. Ellis of San Francisco, who gave the ladies a talk on "Part Time High School for Adults."

The Glee Club of the Fifth and Sixth grades of the Vista Grande school sang two numbers which were greatly enjoyed.

Miss A. Chisholm, who is the principal of Vista Grande school, and Miss M. Moscani, the singing teacher, deserve much credit for the splendid work they are doing in forming the Glee Club.

The Association will hold their bazaar on Wednesday, November 30, at Masonic Hall. In the afternoon the ladies will hold a food and fancy work sale and in the evening there will be an entertainment and sale of goods not disposed of in the afternoon. A large crowd is expected, so be sure and come early.

DESIRE TO SEE BABY IS EXCUSE FOR THEFT

Mrs. Anita Otis, aged 26, and A. W. Korth are in the city prison in San Francisco, having been brought back from Decatur, Texas, on a charge of having stolen an automobile.

Because she wanted to see her 3-year-old baby in Texas, Mrs. Otis aided in the theft of an auto and headed south, she told officers upon her return from the Texas city.

Mrs. Otis was married to Carl C. Otis, of Daly City, last March. She had left her baby, the child of a former marriage, in Texas.

Late in October, it is said, she visited a Van Ness avenue second-hand car store with A. W. Korth and requested that a certain car be demonstrated.

Near Colma, Mrs. Otis and Korth drew revolvers and ordered Alexander Bradley, the driver, to give up the car, according to Bradley. Nearing Gilroy, Bradley was forced to get out and walk, it is charged, and the couple drove on to Texas, where it is said Mrs. Otis saw her child, but now faces a charge of stealing the automobile.

FOOTBALL PLAYERS IN CHAMPIONSHIP CLASH

The Jefferson Union high school football team, winners of the Northern Section, Division B, Peninsula Athletic League, is in Mountain View today, playing the winners of the Southern Division of the B Division championship of the league.

A large crowd of rooters for the Jefferson team will be on the ground, it is expected, to lend encouragement to the boys in their battle for championship honors.

Should the Jefferson boys win at Mountain View today, they will have a chance to play the winner of Division A. The race in Division A resulted in a triple tie between Palo Alto, San Mateo and Burlingame, but it is understood that the San Mateo team will represent Division A.

For the past five years the winner of the championship of Division B has forfeited to the winner of Division A, but this will not be the case if the Jefferson team wins today.

Professor James Ferguson, principal of Jefferson Union high school, is quoted as saying: "If we beat Mountain View, we most certainly will not forfeit to San Mateo. We have an excellent team, and because we are in Division B does not mean that we can not stand up against San Mateo, Burlingame or Palo Alto. Division B has forfeited the game for five years, but this year it is different, and if our team trims Mountain View, the San Mateo eleven will have some worth while competition."

Mountain View, on the other hand, has decided to forfeit the play off for the P. A. L. championship should it win today's game with Jefferson, it is understood.

With the winner of the P. A. L. scheduled to tangle with the winner of the Monterey-Santa Cruz game on November 26, a victory for Jefferson high would mean two games for the winner of the tussle between the Division A and Division B representatives.

The players who will represent Jefferson Union high school in today's game are: Friend, center; Jenkins and Banfield, guards; Keagle and Williams, tackles; Abbott, Brush and Markovich, ends; Plansky, quarterback; Aiello and Gohl, half; Kennedy, fullback.

Both Jefferson and Mountain View have strong elevens this year. Mountain View has especially evidenced a strong line, allowing either a low score or none at all in most of its games this year.

Jefferson's record for the year is as follows:

Jefferson, 13; South San Francisco, 6; Jefferson, 13; Mission high school, 6; Jefferson, 0; Galileo high school, 0; Jefferson, 12; Potter high school, 6; Jefferson, 6; Polytechnic 150's, 0; Eureka, 26; Jefferson, 6.

The defeat of Jefferson by Eureka was charged largely to the long trip, which is said to have fatigued the Jefferson players.

BOY SCOUTS SHOW INTEREST IN WORK

Troop No. 103, Boy Scouts, held their meeting on Tuesday evening. Eight boys subscribed to "Boys Life," the subscription of which is reduced 50 per cent if half of the troop subscribe.

The whist party to be given by the troop will be held on December 15. Cleon Abbott, who is chairman of the committee, expects a large crowd, as he intends to give the party proper advertising.

Henry Suenderman of the Eagle patrol passed first aid test, thus entitling him to the office of second class. His badge was presented to him by the officer in charge, Cleon Abbott. James Jordan and Mervan Crocker also passed tests on the tenderfoot class.

ENTERTAINS FRIENDS ON THIRTEENTH BIRTHDAY

Mr. and Mrs. G. W. McIsaac entertained a number of young folks on Saturday evening, November 5, in honor of their son James, who celebrated his thirteenth birthday. An even dozen of his classmates came to wish him "happy birthday." The evening was spent with music and games, after which ice cream and cake were served. A large pink and white birthday cake, with its thirteen candles, was the main attraction. Favors in keeping with Hallowe'en were given each guest. Those who came to wish James a happy birthday were Hanna Kluger, Mary Phelan, Bernice Becker, Dorothy Combs, Muriel Sherwood, Kenneth Smith, Raymond Pratt, Frank Gigli, Alfred Hoar, Richard Pescaro, Alfred Boynton. The young host received many pretty gifts. Mrs. McIsaac was assisted in entertaining the young folks by her sister, Mrs. Day, of Stockton.

ANNUAL BANQUET GIVEN BY MEMBERS OF COMPANY FOUR

Last Saturday evening the members of Company No. 4, Daly City Volunteer Fire Department, entertained their wives and some of their friends at the annual dinner of the company, held at the Colonial Cafe on Mission street. This annual affair is eagerly looked forward to by the members.

In addition to the splendid spread there were short talks given by the fire chief, police chief, fire commissioners, and before the evening was over every one present, including the ladies, were called upon by the toastmaster, Captain Natusch, to say a few words, and at the conclusion of the banquet the floor was cleared and dancing enjoyed.

Much credit is due Larry Shaw, who was chairman of the committee, for the able way he handled the affair.

The members and their guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. J. Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. G. Schenk, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Augustien, Mr. and Mrs. F. Michelsen, Mr. and Mrs. F. Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. Rickman and daughter Francis, Mr. and Mrs. Wendel, Mr. and Mrs. Vaulk, Mr. and Mrs. Downey, Mr. and Mrs. Kramer, Mr. and Mrs. Hershel, Mr. and Mrs. L. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. De Vincenzi, Mr. and Mrs. A. Natusch, Mr. Romer, Mr. Smith.

SPECIAL SERVICE AT M. E. CHURCH

The Daly City Methodist church is to hold a special Thanksgiving service Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. Everybody is invited to be present. You owe it to God, you owe it to yourself, to come into His sanctuary and raise your voice in thanksgiving. "O for a thousand tongues to sing my great Redeemer's praise; the glories of my God and King, the triumphs of His grace."

We have many blessings to thank God for this year; then let us not forget that the proper place to thank God for His innumerable blessings is the church of Jesus Christ.

How true this is: "When thou hast truly thanked thy God For every blessing sent; But little time will then remain For murmur or lament."

Sunday evening Dr. Carl Warner, district superintendent of the San Francisco district, one of the foremost preachers of the bay district, will be the preacher. He will bring us a real spiritual message. Don't fail to be present. After the service all of the members of the quarterly conference are requested to stay and take part in the first quarterly conference. Sunday school at 10 o'clock and Epworth League at 7 p. m.

Friday night will be the big night. One of the biggest entertainments of the year will be in order at the high school auditorium. Under the direction of Mrs. Bennett the church is presenting a grand Scottish concert. Please note that this is not an amateur show, but consists of the finest talent in Daly City and San Francisco. You would pay $2 to see this same performance in San Francisco, but it will cost you only 50 cents on Friday night at the Jefferson Union high school auditorium. You simply can't afford to miss it. Make your plans now to be present. ELLIOTT L. FISHER, Pastor.

FALSE ALARM CALLS OUT LOCAL FIREMEN

Last Wednesday morning at 2:30 an alarm of fire came in from Box 32, located at Westlake and Miriam. The firemen, after getting out of their nice warm beds, upon arriving at the box from which the alarm was sent, found that some one had turned in a false alarm. The tracks of a machine could be seen on the street where some one had driven up to the box and then turned around and disappeared on Mission street.

It is hoped that the person who gave the false alarm will be caught. The fire commissioners have offered a standing reward of $25 to anyone who catches a person turning in a false alarm.

ENTERTAIN GROUP OF FRIENDS

The Misses Helen and Julia Nation entertained a group of their friends at their home, 167 Peoria street, last Friday evening, November 11. After a pleasant game of whist a musical program was enjoyed and dainty refreshments were served to the following guests: Mr. L. Farley, Mr. and Mrs. E. Nation, Miss Dorothy Farley, Miss M. Rafter, Bud Farley, James Farley, G. Rafter, Paul Nation and Jack Lynch and Charles Canvy, of Westwood Park.

BIDS ARE SUBMITTED FOR SURFACING OF BAY SHORE HIGHWAY

Bids for the grading and surfacing of 5.2 miles of the Bay Shore highway between South San Francisco and Broadway station, Burlingame, were opened last Monday at Sacramento by the California State Highway Commission.

The low bidder was Granfield-Farrar and Carlin, San Francisco contractors, with two offers, one of $107,310 and the other $108,210 for the project. The state highway engineer's estimate was $140,005.

This should be good news to the motorists, and all the people of San Mateo county, as the completion of this highway has long been needed, and has been advocated and worked for by civic bodies of the county.

It is hoped that work will begin immediately, and that this highway will soon be put in shape for heavy traffic.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR DEPUTY JARA

Funeral services were held in South San Francisco last Friday for Jules Jara, deputy sheriff, who was killed one Wednesday last week near San Luis Obispo in an automobile accident. The fatal crash occurred as James Carroll, held for robbery, was being returned to Redwood City for trial. Jess Kentfield, of Redwood City, who was in the machine, was not critically injured.

A requiem mass was celebrated at All Souls' church and at the Holy Cross cemetery officers of the Redwood Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West, of which Jara was an active member, officiated.

Close friends who acted as pallbearers were Leland Quinlan, Edward Farrell, Dr. J. C. McGovern, Joe Roza, "Dud" Thorpe and Sylvester Douglas.

SEWING CLASS IS AIDING RED CROSS

Miss Hoover's sewing class at Jefferson Union high school is doing a great deal of Red Cross work. The girls have already sent in card table covers, the work being highly praised by the Red Cross representatives. The girls are now making dresses for the children of the colored troops on the Mexican border and baby clothes which are to be sent to Manila. All those who help in the work will receive badges for their services. A badge will be given for every article made and there will be no limit to the number that can be received by any person.

"FOUND IT—BUT DON'T WANT IT"

Theme for next Sabbath evening at 8 o'clock at Grace Presbyterian church will be "Found it, But Don't Want it." Is it possible that after 150 years of toil and sacrifice that the thing for which we have labored is not wanted? Come to this service and see what you think of it.

What's the use to support a church if you don't attend it? What's the use to build homes if we don't want to stay in them?

Come on, let us sift the bottom and either shut up or get out into the game for righteous living.

No use to beat about the bush; if this thing is of God it will stand, if not the sooner it fails and falls to ruin the better.

The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes it. Do you believe it?

The C. E. for Sabbath evening, with Mrs. Gatchell for leader, will have a good program. Mrs. Roof will sing and Miss Swan and Miss Savage will play, and a good and profitable time is assured.

Come and let us get the old meaning from the song our fathers sang in days gone by:

A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify;
A never dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky.

We need consecrated teachers to help to train the Sunday school scholars.

Don't forget the bazaar to be given by the ladies of the Guild at the church on December 2.

The people of the tract are very glad to learn that Mrs. McNair, who underwent a serious operation at St. Luke's hospital on Saturday morning, is improving as fast as could be hoped for.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Swan are rejoicing in the completion of their home and sure they have room to be happy in the beautiful and commodious rooms.

CHAS. H. GATCHELL, Minister.

MENLO PARK VOTERS FOR INCORPORATION

By a vote of almost two to one, the incorporation of Menlo Park was approved at a special election held last Tuesday.

The incorporation measure, which has had a stormy history before the board of county supervisors, due to objections by numerous property owners who opposed the calling of an election, carried by a vote of 308 to 199.

Alfred E. Blake, receiving the highest vote among five candidates elected to the board of trustees, will probably be chosen mayor of the new municipality when formal organization of the city government takes place.

Blake received 291 votes. Others elected on the city board are: J. C. Ellis, 232; J. C. Brown, 203; J. H. Heltzel, 201; and J. J. Harcom, 200. They were elected from a field of thirteen candidates.

Fannie I. Kurtz was elected city clerk by a vote of 227, defeating Earle M. Rankin. J. W. Ryan, unopposed for the office of city treasurer, received 315 votes.

The newly elected board of trustees will be sworn into office as soon as the election returns are canvassed by the county board and a copy of the certificate of election filed with Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan at Sacramento. The canvass will be made next Monday.

It is expected that Blake will be named mayor, following a custom which awards the chairmanship to the board to the candidate receiving the highest vote. The board will proceed with appointment of a chief of police, city engineer, city attorney and city police magistrate.

Candidates for the appointive offices are being mentioned, although newly elected members of the board of trustees decline to make public the probable selections.

"THEY LAUGHED HIM TO SCORN"

Father James P. Donohoe delivered the following sermon at St. Maximus church last Sunday:

In the home of the ruler Jarius were men who knew the symptoms and force of death. Frequently they saw it still forever the strong virile bodies of their fellowmen. In battle the fearless eyes of their comrades had been closed without gentleness or pity. Many a living, breathing friend had been changed to a thing of coldness, a thing of ice, by this merciless enemy of our race.

Now its forces are turned against the daughter of their ruler. She feels a burden that is too heavy to be borne. Nature protests in a sighing that is continual and prolonged—it grows fainter and fainter. Slowly this girl fades out of their lives.

In all the surrounding crowd there was found no one to help her. Her breathing ceases. The news passes from one to another that she is dead. In frantic grief, Jarius rushes to the Divine Miracle Worker and pleads for the life of his child. Christ heeds that plea. He went to the girl and said, "She is not dead, but sleepeth." "They laughed Him to scorn." A little later "the maid arose," and the proof of Christ's divinity was forced upon them.

This seems to be the history of Christianity. Scorning precedes belief. A short while ago we saw how evolutionists tried to lead their followers away from God by telling men they were the lineal descendants of lower animals. There were scientists who insisted that the world ran itself and nothing else existed except matter. They theorized on matter and said that it worked accidentally and took on different forms. They became so fixed on processes that they lost sight of the Directing Energy that is behind all things. Their theories paralyzed men's mental machinery and they could not comprehend the spiritual. "They laughed Christ to scorn" and the result was troubled times for society.

Society has, with refined snobbery, kept God entirely out of her functions. Politically He does not exist. With a cynical smile the politician places God's name on the coin of our land while that same name is erased from the text books of our schools. The scornful feel only that which affects the present is worthy of consideration. The quest of pleasure and alleviation of an hour's pain is more important than an eternity of torture. Honesty is a virtue only because it affects present security. Purity is a beautiful symbol to be admired, yet overlooked by many men. They believe what they please, provided they do not suffer any embarrassment by violating the canons of respectability. The result of these ideas has been a slackening of religious life. With the growth of science there were those

PROHIBITION OFFICER IS FATALLY INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Fatally injured when an automobile in which he was riding Monday afternoon crashed into the rear end of an auto bus at Millbrae, Thomas J. Corridan, Jr., a prohibition agent, whose home was at 1107 Guerrero street, San Francisco, died at Mills Memorial hospital, San Mateo, shortly after the accident. Robert B. Wells, also a San Francisco prohibition officer, and the driver of the death car, also suffered severe injuries, and is reported in a serious condition at the hospital.

The accident occurred when Wells applied the brakes of his car in an attempt to avoid a collision with another machine and skidded into the rear of a bus of the Peninsula Rapid Transit Company, which had stopped at Millbrae to discharge passengers, witnesses to the accident declared. The car in which the two men were riding was being driven south at a rapid rate when Wells applied the brakes, according to those who saw the accident.

Both men were employed in the office of Prohibition Administrator E. R. Bohner, San Francisco, and were on their way to meet Bohner at San Jose when the accident occurred, it was learned at the prohibition office.

Corridan, who died without regaining consciousness, had entered the government service only last Saturday and was to have taken part in his first raid Monday night, officials of the prohibition office said. He suffered a basal fracture of the skull when hurled against the rear of the heavy passenger bus.

Wells was found wedged beneath the wheel of his machine, the forward end of which crumpled when it struck the stage. He is suffering from internal injuries and a skull fracture.

ARMISTICE DAY SHOULD REMAIN STATE HOLIDAY

Elated over the general participation of the schools throughout the state in the Armistice day celebration, state officials of the American Legion are prepared to submit a report to Governor Young in support of their contention that November 11 each year should remain as a holiday in California.

When Governor Young signed the legislation making Armistice day a state holiday, he announced that the day was on trial for two years, and that if it were properly observed he would favor legislation to remove the present statute creating the holiday from the books.

"The school children for the first time were brought directly into the Armistice day program under Governor Young's requirements and every one of the 300 odd Posts of the American Legion justified the confidence placed in them and our pledge to the governor," State Commander Phil Dodson declares in reviewing the Armistice day results.

GOOD SAMARITAN KILLED ON HIGHWAY

As Melvin Ralston stood beside his car on the Woodside road last Sunday night, refusing to take pay for having towed another machine from a mudhole, a third machine shot out of the darkness and struck him, killing him instantly. The death car was driven by Frank Towne.

Ralston was an employee of the Woodside Country Club. With another employee he was on his way home when a voice from the dark called for help. Ralston stopped and found Charles Donahue, an official of the San Francisco relief home, sitting in a mired machine. Ralston had just towed the car out when he was struck by Towne's machine. Towne picked the injured man up and took him to a hospital in Redwood City, but the man was dead on arrival. It is understood Towne has been exonerated.

FIRST AID TEAM SETS NEW RECORD

Competing against thirty-two crack First Aid teams from all parts of California, the team representing the gas department of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company at San Rafael added new laurels to its former victories by winning the first prize and state championship at the fourth Pacific Coast Safety Convention and the fifth California Industry First Aid meet at the Biltmore Hotel, Los Angeles. The competing teams represented the following divisions: Manufacturing, mining, municipal, petroleum, and public service.

This is only the second time that the first prize has been won north of the Tehachapi, the Standard Oil Company team having won it in 1925.

who arose from their knees and threw aside their self-styled mental chains. They indulged in forbidden things, and this indulgence has brought sad, serious consequences.

Now too late are these men noting their error. The human mind is a fallible instrument, but it is the only instrument we have for sorting truth from error. We have to do the best we can with it. We must find and bear the consequence of our errors with such fortitude as we may. There is no real conflict between different kinds of truth. All truth asks is a fair field and no favor. Since the majority of mankind is fair-minded by nature, error is always short lived. "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again." One by one we see scientists rejecting their grand theories of materialism and evolution and going back to their old creeds and beliefs.

A university professor came out with a statement the other day in which he disclosed the opinion that the processes of evolution would not work without a directing force behind them. This statement was a great deal like saying that an automobile will not run without gasoline, yet it was received as a pleasant novelty. A noted chemist complained that chemistry is not spiritual enough—meaning that there is not a sufficient sense of the Great Power that is behind all combinations.

It is not difficult to find people who think materialism has run riot. They all admit mankind needs a spiritual renovation—that the world needs religion. Many of them fail to realize the spirituality that makes religion valuable is based on the belief in an invisible world of things that cannot readily be tested by the senses. They want spirituality and they have not got the price to pay, for the price is belief in the invisible things. Invisible but not inaccessible to people who know how to get them. Men laughed Christ to scorn. Later they were forced to acknowledge, "Indeed this was the Son of God." Scientists laughed Him to scorn, and today scientists are bowing to the eternal forces of truth.

There is an immense rising of disgust and impatience with the giant materialism and the theory of evolution. For over nineteen hundred years the world was offered something better and safer—Christianity. It is the world's only hope. It must be injected into the personal, social, industrial and national problems of the world if we are to receive the help we need. All men must learn that the scientific conception of a world that ran itself is entirely wrong. They must learn that there is a power behind the world, and that power is Christ. He has a solution for all our problems and difficulties.

I trust when this world passes from your vision, you will be sustained by the power of Christ and His Sacrament. That it may be said that you "are not dead, but sleepeth." I trust you will enter into eternal life and conclude an unending pact with the Author of eternity; that the gates of Heaven will open wide to receive your soul and your heritage be the unspeakable joys of the elect.

The State Theatre will present a double feature bill this Saturday, November 19, Jack Mulhall in "See You in Jail," and Esther Ralston and Raymond Hatton in "Fashions for Women." The popular Kiddie Revue will also be presented.

A PLEASANT EVENING

Last Sunday evening several of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Fellows gathered at their home, having learned there was a goodly offering of culinary dainties to be sampled. The last one arriving was the signal for everyone to find his place and shortly there was not a vacant chair. During the sampling, which was performed with surprising appreciation, there were a number of polite pauses, while short speeches, abounding in wit, humor and sentiment, were uttered by several of those present. It was decidedly amusing to hear what the doctor, the financier, the builder, the singer, the chef, the teacher, or different members of the family had to say. Everyone gave evidence that fear of vitamins had been left at home. There was singing in chorus, occasionally, and a number of fine vocal solos were rendered. The last part of the pleasure consisted of a number of spirited dances, all taking part. From beginning to end there were so many pleasing surprises that the fortunate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Fellows are grateful that the message of welcome was wafted their way, in time.

HERE AND THERE

The recent death of E. R. McDonald, who warned valley people of the flood which destroyed Johnstown, Pa., in 1889, recalls a story which was quite popular shortly after the disaster. The "hero of the Johnstown flood" went to heaven, so the story goes, and began telling of his brave exploits. One venerable listener appeared bored, and then turned on his heel and walked away. When the hero asked who the unappreciative gentleman was, he was told, "That's Noah."

Artie Atherton, born at Fort Smith, Arkansas, weighed 2 pounds at birth, was carried on a pillow until the age of 6, now weighs 38 pounds at the age of 39, is married to a normal woman, and is the father of three healthy children.

When Louisville, Kentucky, voters went to the polls on November 8, they were handed a ballot somewhat larger in size than the average weekly newspaper. It measured 24 by 38 inches and contained the names of 176 state, county and city candidates. It looks as though the ballot boxes were literally "stuffed" in this case.

Mussolini is to abolish all holidays in Italy except two, and these must be observed on Sundays. It will be interesting to see how this policy of all work and no play works out. In view of the Latin fondness for holidays and public demonstrations, it is doubtful that the innovation will add to Il Duce's popularity.

The late Lord Northcliffe, famed British publisher, did not believe that a person whose conduct was always perfectly correct amounted to much. He said: "I don't want men around me who are not capable of making a fool of themselves once in a while. It is only by such capers they have a true appreciation of the best things in home and business life."

There are 248 bears in Yellowstone Park, according to a census taken recently under the auspices of the Department of the Interior, of which 174 are black and brown bears, and 74 are grizzlies. One grizzly mother had four cubs, three mothers had three cubs each, three others had two each. Anyone who disputes these figures may count them for himself, a job not as dangerous as it would seem, as most of these bears are quite tame, through long contact with rangers and visitors to the park.

Making pie with a garden rake is a rather unusual proceeding, but no ordinary kitchen implement could suffice to mix the ingredients of a monster apple pie recently baked in Seattle in celebration of apple week. The pie contained a ton of apples, 200 pounds of flour and 100 pounds of sugar. Under the circumstances the use of a rake was highly appropriate and necessary.

Sometime ago candidates for the title of "champion father" bobbed up here and there, several attaining considerable notoriety on account of the large number of their children. Andred Jokoff, a Russian, 113 years old, who recently applied for an old age pension, appears to have some claim to recognition in the fathering line. He told the authorities that he had reared fifty-four children in Siberia, and that his "oldest boy" was teaching school in Omsk at the age of 80.

Rev. W. R. Holder, returned missionary from the Belgian Congo, reports improved manners among the cannibals of that region. They have eaten no native for about a year, while it has been about twelve years since the last white man went into the pot, he being a trader who had been hard-boiled in his dealings with the Congo folk.

Arthur Brisbane declares that the late Tom Watson of Georgia once confided to him that "the whole secret of success in politics is to remember that it is impossible to exaggerate the stupidity of the public." The bunk which certain politicians are able to make a majority of the voters believe convinces us that old Tom was more than half right.

HEROES

The following poem, which recently appeared in the Employees Magazine of the Standard Oil Company, was written by Walter L. Murphy, of Daly City:

A farewell to loved ones;
Then off with a roar
On a perilous journey,
To return no more.

Lost on the ocean,
Alone they must lie
Out in the depths,
Under God's blue sky.

They were the heroes
Who dared to fly.
They knew no peril,
Nor feared to die.

For future mankind
They flew to the grave.
God grant them mercy;
Those noble; those brave!

TELEPHONE SERVICE TIED UP
BY UNLUCKY BLUE HERON

A blue heron recently tied up long distance telephone service for two hours on a circuit from Reno to Lovelock, Nevada. Telephone linemen arrived at the scene of the trouble shortly after it was reported and found a blue heron hanging by its neck from the wires.

It is supposed that the big bird, in the course of its rapid cross-country flight, blundered against the telephone wires, with disastrous results. The heron had twisted two wires together, short-circuiting the line, and was held tightly between them, with no chance for escape.

Telephone men say that the blue heron had a wing-spread of six feet and that he measured five feet two inches from the tip of his bill to the end of his long toes. With this incident on record, the blue heron must be listed as one of the many wild creatures which inadvertently cause telephone line trouble.

THAT LOVING PAIR

By Wesley Strong.

There's a house by the road;
I've often thought
Sweet love doth there abide,
Sweet dreams are wrought.

Red roses cling above
The porch. All in love
With the suckle and ivy-wild,
The thriving shrubs and sleeping child.

In the house by the road.

Where often I walk,
Quiet, asleep, dear peaceful mood
When ever they talk.
Voices come through the air from afar.

Then I stop, I say "There they are."

Naught have I seen, but know
they're there,
In that little house—that loving pair.

"The Way of All Flesh," in which Emil Jennings, the celebrated actor, is featured, will be at the State Theatre for three days, next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, November 21, 22 and 23. Everyone in this district will want to see this picture, and in order to give all an opportunity to do so, the management has made arrangements for its presentation for three days.

SUBJECT AUTOMOBILE ENGINES TO TEST

In order that automobile motors may stand up and perform efficiently during the winter months, all motors are subjected to a rigorous test to prove their working qualities under subzero conditions. All these tests are conducted in a giant ice box where temperature can be controlled and varied, and the men that work in these rooms wear aviator's togs to protect them from the intense cold.

STUDY OF WEAR OF AUTO TIRES

Tests Being Made to Determine Wear on Tread by Road Surfaces.

A study of the wear of automobile tires has been made to determine, as far as possible, the destructive effect of different types of road surfaces on the tread rubber, so that, insofar as possible, surfaces may be so improved as to make the total cost of building and maintaining road surfaces and of operating the traffic over them a minimum, according to Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club. The cost of tires is one element of the cost of operating motor vehicles and may well be studied.

The University of Kansas, co-operating with the United States bureau of public roads and the State College of Washington, has conducted a series of tests in an effort to determine the loss of tread rubber caused by several types of road surfaces, including concrete, brick and bitulithic pavements, penetration, macadam, and several types of gravel and broken stone. The following tentative conclusions have been drawn from the few data now available:

Tentative Conclusions.

1. Tire wear increases with the speed.
2. Tire wear increases with the temperature. High temperatures are very destructive to tires.
3. The wear of rear tires is greater than that of front tires, the relative wear of rear tires being 200 per cent on smooth pavements, and as little as 18 per cent on gravel surfaces, probably averaging 150 per cent of the wear on front tires.
4. Tire wear per ton of car is probably constant for any given road surface, when size of tire, load and inflation pressure are determined by a single standard.
5. A few records of bus companies show actual tire mileage life on different road surfaces in approximate agreement with tire wear tests on similar surfaces.

Relative Tire Wear.

6. Relative tire wear index numbers, based upon average concrete pavements as 1.0 are approximately 2.0 for good gravel and macadam, 4.0 and 5.0 for average western macadam or crushed chert gravels, and may be as high as 10 or 11 for unusually unfavorable surfaces. Based upon tire wear alone, average size cord tires should show a life of 20,000 to 24,000 miles upon pavements; 10,000 to 12,000 miles on good gravel or macadam, and as little as 2,000 to 4,000 miles upon unfavorable surfaces. The corresponding costs per vehicle mile are about 0.5 cents for pavements, 1.0 cents for average gravel or best macadam, 2.3 cents for average macadam, and maybe as much as 5 cents per vehicle upon road surfaces of loose, sharp-edged stones.

Deposits on Cylinders

Is Result of Oiling

It is common belief among motorists that the hard carbon residue found in the cylinders and on the valves is the result of too great a quantity of lubricating oil. This is true to a certain extent, but the hard deposit may be formed even when the proper amount of the best quality of oil is used.

It has been found that the nucleus of this deposit consists of the products of imperfect combustion of the mixture, which collect on the piston head and walls of the top of the cylinder in the form of a sticky mass. This catches the dirt and dust from the road as it is "breathed" into the motor through the carburetor, and the resulting compound gradually hardens until a sufficient deposit is collected to make a thorough overhauling and valve-grinding necessary. It is consequently important not only that the proper grade and amount of lubricant should be used in the cylinder, but that the carburetor should be regulated to deliver the proportion of air and gasoline vapor that forms the most perfect-burning charge for each explosion.

Speed Trucks Displace Horse-Drawn Vehicles

Internal combustion crowded the horse off the highway, but it is probable that the horse would have obsoleted himself anyway. It would be impossible for metropolitan centers of today to depend upon slow and cumbersome horse-drawn vehicles. The lumbering old wagons of two decades ago would clog the wheels of progress in an annoying or even disastrous fashion. It is doubtful even that enough horseflesh could be bred and maintained to take care of present hauling needs.

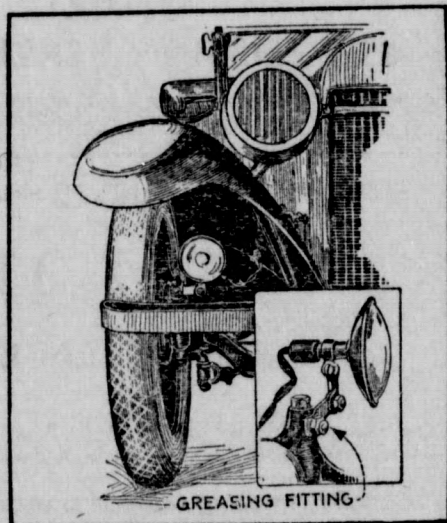

Transportation facilities progress with demand. The latest innovation in motor trucking is the lighter vehicle—the power and speed truck. Motor truck manufacturers today realize that the popular demand is for a vehicle that can move heavy loads quickly.

Although, relatively speaking, the "speed truck" is an innovation, a western concern pioneered this type of vehicle some time ago.

SPOTLIGHT TURNS WITH CAR WHEEL

Especially Handy in Turning Many Dark Corners.

Spotlights are especially handy to illuminate sharp corners, but they are rather inconvenient to manipulate unless they are set at a certain angle and then switched on only while turning a corner. But as corners have different radii, the illumination often does not fall where it should, and the light is of little or no help to the driver. An improvement is shown in the illustration. The spotlight is attached to the front-wheel spindle so that it turns with the wheel. The supporting bracket can be clamped to the spindle, or, if a stronger attachment is desired, the aluminum fitting may be removed and a small bolt, running through a hole previously drilled in the light bracket, substituted. However, if this method is used, the bolt must be removed to permit greasing the king pin.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Handy Spotlight.

Two hundred fifty-eight new oil wells have been started in the fields of Kern county this year, out of a total of 1,010 for the entire state. During the past week three new holes were begun. One of the new wells was begun by the Associated Oil Company in the Round Mountain field, making another company to enter this field, which is but a few months old.

Tightening Pays Double

Keeping the body bolts tight has an advantage other than that it serves to eliminate troublesome noises and wear. If the bolts are taken up regularly it means that they are not allowed to become so rusty that the nuts cannot be turned on them. It does not pay to allow this task to remain undone over a long period, for when the motorist gets around to it he probably will find that many of the bolts will have to be replaced.

AUTOMOBILE ITEMS

Try to avoid ruts and bumps in the roadway. It saves excessive wear on the springs.

Oil is life to the car. Don't neglect changing the lubrication fluids at the proper time.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

Building operations in the four peninsula cities of Palo Alto, Burlingame, San Mateo and Redwood City for the month of October totaled $525,403. Palo Alto led with $245,833 in building permits, followed by Burlingame with a total of $124,705. The total for San Mateo was $118,850 and for Redwood City, $36,010.

The surprising announcement that at least forty per cent of all motorists who come to California each year remain here is made by the State Division of Motor Vehicles. Offering new evidence of the State's fast growth, the division revealed that approximately 28,000 of the 70,000 motorists who secure visitors' permits each year exchange these permits for permanent licenses later on.

The De Luxe and Scout halls, in the downtown district of Palo Alto are in ruins following fire that caused damage estimated at $75,000 last week. The blaze started in De Luxe Hall and spread to the other hall before firemen could be summoned. Eleven automobiles under Scout Hall were destroyed.

Photograph of the stars, sunspots and of other heavenly phenomena will soon be taken in the University of Santa Clara by the use of one of the largest telescopes in the country, now being erected. The instrument is a sixty-inch reflecting telescope, with non-tarnishable silver mirrors. It will be used in the Father Ricard Memorial Observatory.

The bridge across Dog Creek at Delta near Redding on the State Highway stands completed at a cost of $110,000. Construction work was begun over a year ago. The bridge will not be open to travel for two weeks, pending the completion of the earth approaches. The bridge is a 450-foot arch span, the floor being 128 feet above the bed of Dog Creek. The new bridge shortens the distance between Redding and Dunsmuir.

California's oldest copper, boasting fifty-four years of active service, is doing daily duty up on the dome of the California State Capitol at Sacramento. State Architect George B. McDougall made this announcement last week, and when he says "copper" he doesn't mean police officer. He means that the sheet copper covering the entire dome of the California State Capitol building has been there since 1873. Its excellent condition has aroused comment among experts on copper and inquiries regarding the dome were received last week from the Copper and Brass Research Association of New York.

Women inmates of San Quentin will work hereafter, it became known last week when they occupied their new three-story building equipped with an industrial room running the full length of the ground floor. In the old antiquated quarters barely enough space was provided to house the feminine inmates, numbering ninety-three, and no provision could be made to interest the prisoners in a useful occupation. The new building gives the women new opportunities.

Tioga Pass road into Yosemite has had its first snowfall and can be considered closed for the season, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of California. A fall of fifteen inches was reported to the Auto Club a few days ago. More snow is expected, while Yosemite National Park reported rain. The all-year road into Yosemite is in good condition and will remain open during the winter, but motorists should be equipped with chains.

Two hundred fifty-eight new oil wells have been started in the fields of Kern county this year, out of a total of 1,010 for the entire state. During the past week three new holes were begun. One of the new wells was begun by the Associated Oil Company in the Round Mountain field, making another company to enter this field, which is but a few months old.

Frank E. Mitchell, president of the Sacramento Real Estate Board, last week announced the appointment of five members of the board to an executive committee to perfect arrangements for the twenty-fourth annual convention of the California Real Estate Association to be held in Sacramento next year. Glenn D. Williams, secretary of the state realty organization, was in Sacramento during last week and conferred with the local board regarding the coming conclave, which is expected to develop into one of the best ever held by the association. A tentative decision to stage the convention from Monday to Friday, October 8 to 12. At least 12,000 delegates, and perhaps more from all sections of the state will be in attendance and the conclave is regarded as of particular importance because there will be gathered here realtors and city builders from 100 cities in California.

No longer will crooks be employed in positions of trust by the city of San Diego. To put a halt to the hiring of men who have "records" in other cities, all applicants for jobs, from police down to common laborers, must undergo fingerprinting, and have the prints scrutinized by the identification bureau. Bootleggers, particularly, have practiced removing from cities where they have been convicted, and obtaining public employment in a city where they were unknown in order to become personally acquainted with the police, county and federal authorities.

The Federal Land Bank of Berkeley announced last week that during the month of October it made 124 loans to farmers of California, Utah, Nevada and Arizona, totaling in value $507,500. California farmers were given 63 loans, totaling $238,200; Utah 43, totaling $106,100; Nevada 8, totaling $70,500; Arizona 10, totaling $42,700.

Chester Rowell, members of the State tax commission, last week left for Washington, D. C., at the request of Governor C. C. Young, to appear before the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives this California administration to repeal of week and present opposition of the Federal tax.

Eleven new State banks chartered by the State Banking Department since January 1, 1927, have added total resources to the State banking system to the amount of $13,533,368.86 or over $1,200,000 per bank as an average during the last nine months. These figures were revealed by the State Banking Department last week. Branch banks included by State banks are not included in the figures, only unit banks being considered. The State Banking Department as a matter of policy has discouraged the organization of new banks with less than $50,000 capital, officials of the department said. None of the banks mentioned had a capital of less than $50,000.

California's county library system, operated in conjunction with the State Library at Sacramento, is being copied in England and Scotland with great success, according to State Librarian Milton J. Ferguson, who has just returned from Europe. Ferguson attended the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the British Library Association.

California clergy are entitled to the benefits of the workmen's compensation insurance act in case of "industrial injury," which would mean injury while engaged in acting as ministers of the gospel. All ministers have been so advised in a circular sent out by the Division of Industrial Accidents and Safety, State Department of Industrial Relations.

More than 6,000 persons have been arrested in Bakersfield for offenses ranging from petit theft and disturbing the peace, to assault, grand theft and other felonies since the first of the year, according to a report just completed at headquarters by Chief of Police Phil Fickert at Bakersfield. Since the chief, on January 1st, took office, 223 men and women have been arrested within the city limits for bootlegging, and more than 70 per cent of them have pleaded guilty and paid fines ranging from $100 to $500 in police court. During the same period, according to the ten months' record just brought to date, 284 men have been cited to police court for drunkenness. Last month's arrests totaled 642.

Service on steam railroads, electric railways and interurban lines in California compares very favorably with service on similar lines throughout the entire country, according to a report submitted to the Railroad Commission by Chief Engineer A. G. Mott of the commission, summarizing the results of a tour of investigation of the principal states, with particular reference to transportation. The report states that street car and interurban electric railway fares are generally higher in the East than in California.

Plans to reopen the American Boy gold mine in the Granite Basin country, in Butte county, are announced by Ralph Smith, who with his business associates has arrived at Oroville from Los Angeles. The owners plan to conduct operations on a large scale. A new stamp mill has been ordered and work is being rushed to install it before roads leading to the project are blocked by snow. The mine is also known as the "olan project and has been worked intermittently for many years. It already has a small stamp mill.

The Los Angeles Examiner reported last week that the General Motors Corporation has secured options on two tracts of land in the Long Beach harbor district, Los Angeles, with the intention of entering the local field with a large manufacturing plant. One site comprises 600 acres and the other 300. Recent plans of the Ford company indicates that they will enter this territory with a much larger program than was originally intended. Consequently General Motors also has decided to locate a plant at Los Angeles.

Guayule rubber, produced from shrubs plentiful in the arid regions of California and Mexico, has received recognition by the United States Bureau of Standards of "comparing favorably" with plantation Hevea rubber. Reports received last by the California Department of Agriculture states that the federal bureau has just completed extensive tests which point to the utilization of the Guayule shrub for commercial purposes. The shrub, which produces a copious supply of milk, grows voluntarily over many parts of southern California.

James W. Smith, state forest ranger of Amador county, has submitted his annual report of the fires and damages throughout Amador county during this season to the Division of Forestry. The report states, in the heading of suppression of fires a total cost of $738.75 to both county and state. Smith in the report estimates under the area burned, a total of 1583 acres of timber; brush, 6200, and grass, 18,542. In his estimates of damage done the ranger gives $1570 for timber, $9468.75 for ranges, improvements $17,100.

When Power Unit Fails to Deliver

"Trouble Shooting" in "B" Device by Process of Elimination.

By CHARLES GOLENPAUL, In Radio News.

"Trouble shooting" in the "B" socket-power unit should be a systematic process of elimination—but with nothing eliminated until it has been checked up. In other words, take nothing for granted; because things taken for granted are often the very things causing the trouble. We all recall the chap who took the automobile half apart, looking for trouble, when some one reminded him that his gas tank was empty. Radio trouble shooting can be very much the same.

The first step in trouble-shooting the B-device is to make sure that the 110-volt current is turned on, and that it is reaching the transformer primary of the device. The next step is to be sure that the fault lies with the B-unit, and not with the associated radio receiver.

With the trouble narrowed down to the B-device, the logical procedure is to start with the resistance bank and then work backward through the filter, rectifier tube, and finally the transformer.

Defective Resistors.

A common trouble, when trouble does occur, is the absence of voltage at a given tap. This is generally traceable to an open-circuited or burnt-out resistor. Thus if the "B" unit becomes open, the detector voltage will immediately increase; so that, in the tuned radio-frequency receiver, the signal strength will be greatly diminished, while in the regenerative receiver there will be constant oscillation.

A defective resistor may be located by means of a high-resistance voltmeter connected to each tap in turn. The reading obtained at each tap should be approximately that called for by the designation on the tap. In the absence of a high-resistance voltmeter, a 15-watt, 220-volt incandescent lamp may be employed. It "glows" a dull red on the full output and on the intermediate tap of the B-power unit. If it lights to equal brightness on the detector tap, it is an indication of an open or defective 10,000-ohm fixed resistor.

A satisfactory temporary repair can generally be made by means of a variable resistor connected between the plus binding post and the terminal which gives no voltage. The resistance is adjusted until the proper voltage is obtained, and this saves the trouble of seeking the correct value for a fixed resistor, while at the same time providing ample current-handling capacity.

If the voltage taps are found satisfactory, yet the receiver still fails to operate properly, the trouble may be due to an open by-pass condenser. A short-circuited by-pass condenser will act in the same manner as a short-circuited resistor.

Tracing Circuits.

If there is no voltage at any of the terminals, the trouble may be traced to an open circuit in the wiring, or in the transformer or choke-coil windings, or again to a broken-down condenser. The wiring should be checked over for broken or bad connections.

The transformer secondary and choke-coil windings can be tested by means of a telephone receiver, and a dry cell, for continuity. Filter condensers can be tested by the same means, with a loud click at the time of making contact, and a weaker click upon successive tapping of the terminals, to indicate a good condenser. If the successive clicks are equally loud, the condenser is short-circuited.

After this, the rectifier tube should be considered. The best method is to try a new tube or a tube known to be good, in place of the existing tube. This is especially true with the gas-cathode type of tube, which gives no other indication of its operation than a slight warmth.

Use of Copper Sulphate on Some Soldering Jobs

Sometimes it is desired to solder to a piece of iron such as a diaphragm used in a receiver. As you may have doubtless found out, this cannot be done directly, for the solder will not take, no matter how much flux is used. If, however, a few grains of copper sulphate are first rubbed over the clean bright metal and then the soldering flux applied, it will be found that the solder will readily adhere to the iron. Care will have to be exercised, as the copper placed on the iron by this method is at best only a thin film and comes off quite readily. Also, remember that copper sulphate is very poisonous.

Control of Speaker Volume

Do not try to control loud speaker volume by burning the tube filaments brighter or dimmer. Such control is erroneous and ruins tone quality. A high-resistance variable resistor across the secondary of the first audio transformer, or again across the terminals of the loud speaker, acts as an excellent volume control.

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A neighbor advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which she said had helped her so much. So I bought a few bottles and tried it out. It sure helped me wonderfully. I felt much better. My work was no longer a dread to me. If I hear of any one who is troubled the way I was, I will gladly recommend the Vegetable Compound to them and I will answer any letters in regard to the same."—Mrs. BERTHA MEACHAM, 1134 N. Penn. Ave., Lansing, Mich.

"I had been sickly ever since I was fifteen years old. After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I got so I could do all my housework and I am in good health."—Mrs. MARY K. WILLIAMS, Ketchikan, Alaska.

From Michigan to Alaska, from Maine to Oregon and from Connecticut to California letters are continually being written by grateful women recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Compound is made from roots and herbs and for more than fifty years has been helping to restore run-down, over-worked women to health.

Wind

John Halkett, president of the building trades council, was discussing in New York the three-cornered wrangle between Italy, Yugo-Slavia and Albania.

"They talk a lot," he ended, "but nothing will happen. Talk, talk, talk."

And then Mr. Halkett smiled and said: "Windy people never come to blows."

Costly to Railroads

In 1926 the railroads of the country paid more than $8,000,000 in settlement of claims for damage to fresh fruit and vegetables in transit. This amounted to an average of nearly $8 a car, while damage claims on all other commodities averaged about 50 cents a car.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious! Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning: It is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physicians recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtful drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them! Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

THE ROLL CALL

Newspapers and the public have become rather tired of campaigns, drives, special weeks and the like, of which we have had more than enough, particularly during the last few years.

But there is one annual effort which should enlist the hearty support of everyone, whatever he may think of the rest. We refer to the Red Cross Roll Call, held each year between Armistice day and Thanksgiving.

This year the event has an unusual significance, in view of the magnitude of the work performed by that great humanitarian organization during the last twelve months, in which nearly a million persons, victims of seventy-seven different disasters, have had the benefit of its kindly ministrations.

The outstanding disaster of the year was the Mississippi valley flood, where more than 607,000 unfortunates were given sorely needed relief during the emergency period, and because of which further assistance is still being rendered.

So well known and so highly esteemed is the invaluable services performed by the Red Cross, always promptly and efficiently, that no extended argument for its support is necessary. The 5,000,000 members set as its goal for this year should be secured without difficulty.

It is hoped that San Mateo county will do its part on this occasion, as it has in the past, quickly and cheerfully. It takes only a dollar to respond to the call of this great roll, which is indeed a roll of honor.

AFTER NINE YEARS

Armistice day, which was generally observed in these United States last Friday, marking the ninth anniversary of the end of the World war, again recalls the stern realities of that titanic struggle, which changed the map of the world.

The significance of the events which have occurred since November 11, 1918, may be variously interpreted, according to the viewpoint from which we see them. To some it will appear that great progress has been made toward universal peace, while to others the trend of events will imply grave danger for the future.

Even a single individual must often be imbued alternately with hope and fear—hopeful when some felicitous occurrence seems to draw the nations closer together; fearful when an outbreak here or there threatens to undo all efforts for concord and understanding.

No one is wise enough to foretell the future. Was the "war to end war" the last great clash of nations, or was it only the prelude to more frightful slaughter and destruction yet to come?

Only time can give the answer. But in the meantime it behooves all right thinking persons, and particularly those in positions of influence and responsibility, to exercise whatever they may possess of tolerance, forbearance and the will to do justice to their fellowmen.

FIGHTING INFERNO ON EARTH

A minister at Dallas, Oregon, invited the whole town to a special sermon on "Fire Prevention." He might have likened it to the fire-and-brimstone of Calvinism. But he didn't. He told it just as it is, with the fire loss of life running to 15,000 or more a year, mostly women and children and hospital inmates. It's almost as bad in America as the World war; an infinitely less defensible, for there is in the fire loss no plea of national honor, no protest against outside assault, but only personal greed and carelessness and bravado.

It is a moral and spiritual question that the church might well take up and handle without gloves.

A cannibal probably originated the idea of living off one's neighbors.

THOSE WILD STUDENTS

Although we do not hear so much about the wildness of youth, and particularly college youth, as we did a year or two ago, when it was the fashion to insist that the younger generation was "going to the dogs," there are still many who look upon our young people with apprehension.

It may be in some small degree reassuring to these to know what some of our college students are really doing in the way of serious preparation for the duties and responsibilities of life.

It may be satisfying for them to know that one-third of the entire student body at Yale is either wholly or partly self-supporting, through earnings outside of school hours. During the past year these earnings totaled $593,679.67, of which $350,856.17 were from work during the school term and $242,823.50 during the summer vacation.

Among the occupations which enabled these students to earn their way were those of artist's model, bookkeeper, caretaker, chauffeur, clerk, entertainer, gardener, guide, messenger, reader, tutor, translator, mechanic and others. Some acted as salesmen for various commodities, one having earned more than $4,000 during the year, another $3,000, four earned more than $2,000 each, twenty-eight earned between $1,000 and $2,000, and 135 earned more than $500.

When such a large percentage of college students show the industry to make spare time earnings like these, in addition to keeping up their exacting school work, it does not appear that modern youth is so frivolous, after all.

LET THEM ALL COME

Noting the success of the visit of American veterans to France, Howard P. Savage, past national commander of the American Legion, has made the suggestion that the British Legion hold its next general convention in the United States.

There is much to commend the idea and it would be difficult to find a single reason in opposition to it. Visiting back and forth by former comrades in arms would do much to strengthen the bonds of friendship between the countries concerned. It would be most desirable to have the British come, likewise the Canadians, French and other allied veterans, from time to time.

At some future day it might be well to invite the Germans and other representatives of the Central Powers to hold a reunion in this country. If we hope to maintain peace we must try to forget the animosities created by the war, and strive for better understandings all around.

It is difficult to conceive of a better way to do this than to encourage friendly visits by those who bore the brunt of the great war, and who above all others "can appreciate the blessings of peace.

A NOBLE BEQUEST

Another fine example of the growing tendency toward benevolence on the part of wealthy men is seen in the will of the late Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway and official in numerous other large enterprises.

Mr. Warfield leaves his residuary estate, estimated to be between five and ten million dollars for the founding of a home for dependent aged women. It will be located at his Manor Glen farm near Monckton, Md., and will be called "Anna Emory Warfield Home," in memory of his mother.

Beginning as a clerk, Mr. Warfield rose to high eminence in the industrial and banking world. He was one of the leaders in the amazing development which has taken place in the South during the last two decades. His high character and humanitarian impulses may be judged by the noble bequest he made for the care of unfortunate aged women.

The home which his beneficence will establish will stand as a monument to his useful life and as a memorial to the devoted mother who gave him birth.

"CATS" IN THE LOGGING CAMPS

Many of the huge Northwest logging camps handle their logs with a donkey engine and cable line. But an astonishing proportion of the lumber of America is now being hauled by "caterpillar" tractors, or "cats," as they are colloquially known. They can go almost anywhere that a man can walk; they can turn in their own length; they can be used for stationary power plants, for cable use or for any other power purpose; they are almost indestructible, and economical. Once the loggers used oxen in the woods, because an ox team will tug steadily where a nervous horse will soon go crazy. But the "cat" never loses its head, never takes distemper, never balks.

The house in which you live, if built in whole or in part within the past five years, almost certainly is a monument to the caterpillar tractor. It has brought you your lumber cheaper than it could have reached you in any other way known to man.

The Mississippi river is rather low now, but it is thought that in time it will be able to be up and out gain.

It is said that Tunney and Dempsey may fight again. Well, Gene has formed a habit that is hard to break.

A REMARKABLE CAREER

Walter Perry Johnson, America's most famous living baseball pitcher, and one of the greatest of all time, has definitely ended his big league career after 21 years of service with one team, the Washington Senators of the American League. He has been released at his own request.

Forty years old on November 6, Johnson holds the record for the most pitching years, most games pitched and most games won by any major league pitcher, having won 414 games and lost 275.

In one game in 1924 he struck out 14 Chicago batsmen, six of them in succession; he pitched a no-hit no-run game against Cincinnati in 1920. In all he pitched 113 shut-out games and is credited with 3,494 strike outs. In 1913 he pitched 56 consecutive shut-out innings between April 10 and May 14.

What is perhaps the most remarkable feature of Johnson's career is that during the greater part of his long service he worked with a hopelessly inferior club, yet he never failed to put his whole heart into the game. Only once did his team win a world's series, in 1924. In 1925 it won the American League pennant but lost the series.

Since retiring from the Senators, Johnson has signed a contract to manage the Newark team of the International League, and his thousands of admirers will "pull" for him on the bench as they have rooted for him when in the box.

Not only as a great pitcher is Johnson esteemed by followers of the national game. His high character and exemplary sportsmanship have won universal praise and no player who ever graced a diamond is held in greater affection by lovers of baseball.

Colma News Notes

Mr. and Mrs. Puccinelli have moved into their beautiful new home on Vale street, near Mission.

Mr. and Mrs. Fernando, of Bruno avenue, entertained relatives at their home last Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. E. Bergmann and Mrs. Sam Flanders, of San Francisco, were Colma visitors last Tuesday.

Robert Silva, of Palo Alto, was a luncheon guest at the home of his niece, Mrs. Stephen Fischer, on Tuesday.

On Thursday evening, November 17, the Thanksgiving whist party sponsored by Holy Angels' church took place in the parish hall on San Pedro avenue, and was a most successful and enjoyable affair.

Mrs. Jerry Horkey is home from the hospital and recovering from an operation which she underwent for the removal of her tonsils.

Many Colma residents attended the big whist party given by the Colma Vista Grande Aerie of Eagles in the Daly City Auditorium last Tuesday evening.

The Colma Athletic Club will meet the Jeffersons at what promises to be an exciting baseball game next Sunday. Last Sunday these two teams met and played a scoreless game of eleven innings.

One of the most successful whist parties ever conducted by El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, was held in the Daly City Auditorium Thursday evening of last week. Florence McKendrick and Christine Hume, assisted by the members of the drill team, were in charge of the affair. Excellent dance music was provided after the game and the dancing was thoroughly enjoyed by the large crowd.

Ray Batz, son of Mrs. Beatrice Batz, popular bookkeeper of M. Belli Co., will leave Monday for Utah, where he will spend the next six weeks fulfilling a vaudeville engagement with the West Coast circuit.

Crocker Chapter, Order of De Molay, will give a dance in the Jefferson Union high school auditorium on Saturday evening, November 19. Ray Batz and his popular White Rose orchestra will provide the dance music.

Messrs. Louis Varni and Lester Lorrain will soon open their up-to-date washing and greasing plant on Mission street near Castle street. The very latest equipment is now being installed and these young men promise the very finest service.

The members of the Colma Athletic Club are preparing for the big dance they will give in the Colombo Auditorium on Sunday evening, November 27. Excellent music will be provided for dancing. The affair will be given for the club's baseball team.

George W. Wight, dearly beloved husband of Nellie B. Wight, passed away in Lawndale, November 10, after being ill for some time. He was the loving father of Jason, George, Walter and Edward Wight, Mrs. Lillian Haulpack and Mrs. Bernice North. He was a native of San Francisco, aged 67 years. He was a member of I. O. O. F., San Francisco No. 10. The funeral was held on Monday at 2:30 p. m., from the mortuary chapel of W. C. Lasswell & Co., Daly City. Interment was in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The New Colma Theatre is now under new management, Mr. J. C. Bennett having taken charge. Mr. Bennett has been in the theatre business all his life, having been connected with theatres in Los Angeles, Chicago and New York City, and is thoroughly familiar with the business in all its phases. He announces that the New Colma Theatre is now playing 100 per cent pictures only. Satisfaction is guaranteed, and if after seeing a show you are dissatisfied, your money will be cheerfully returned.

Many local people plan to attend the pageant and grand ball to be given in the Civic Auditorium in San Francisco on Thanksgiving eve for the benefit of the homeless children taken care of by the order of Native Sons and Daughters of the Golden West. Promptly at 8 o'clock there will be a competition drill in which the drill team of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, N. D. G. W., has been entered. Major Laura Figone will conduct the local girls through their drill. Be on hand early to give them a cheer. The pageant will commence at 8:30, and dancing will follow.

On Monday evening of this week the members of the drill team of El Carmelo Parlor No. 181, Native Daughters of the Golden West, tendered Miss Margaret Varni a surprise miscellaneous shower at the home of Miss Elsie Fahey, of Crocker Tract. All spent an enjoyable evening. Vocal duets were rendered by Misses Laura Figone and Tessie O'Connor and several pleasing solos by Miss Figone. Miss Annette Lucey and Miss Figone received much applause for their dance numbers. At midnight a most delicious supper was served, the dining room being attractively decorated with yellow crepe paper and Thanksgiving turkeys. A lovely cake surmounted by a tiny bride and groom was at Miss Varni's place. This popular young lady is to be married to Mr. Al Kennedy, of Crocker Tract, early in December. The girls present were Margie O'Connor, Sarah Battaini, Ruby O'Connor, Lorraine Wall, Dolores Barron, Margaret Varni, Sylvia Fischer, Caroline Spani, Frieda Christen, Tessie O'Connor, Florence McKendrick, Annette Lucey, Christine Hume, Laura Figone, and Elsie Fahey. The bride to be received many lovely gifts.

TRAFFIC CODE WINS SUPPORT
Officials of incorporated municipalities throughout the state are enthusiastic in their support of the uniform traffic ordinance for California cities, according to Supervisor Charles F. Todd, of San Francisco, president of the California Municipal Traffic League, which is in session at Los Angeles to plan a drive for general adoption of the standardized code. Todd's report of the general tendency to favor the ordinance is based on acceptances thus far received from city officials invited to attend the league sessions. The league plans adoption of a program that will assure adoption of the measure throughout the state.

The rolling pin has been selected as the insignia of a troop of Massachusetts Girl Scouts, who probably took their cue from the Boy Scouts' motto, "Be Prepared."

Naturalists say the boyfly can travel 815 miles an hour, which is about ten times as fast as the speediest boy friend.

MILLBRAE WINS HIGH AWARD IN MILK TEST

Competing with over 200 entries from eleven western states, including Hawaii, the Millbrae Dairy, at Millbrae, was awarded one of the eight gold medals given for the milk which made the highest grades in tests conducted at the Pacific Slope Dairy Show, held this week at the Oakland Auditorium. This award speaks well for conditions in San Mateo county relative to the production of milk, when it is a fact that the competition included the very best herds of stock and the most noted producers of milk on the coast.

A warm, clean home

That's the beauty of Gas fuel

You'll have clean, comfortable, care-free heating all winter long when you heat your home with gas fuel. And there'll be no soot or dirt.

For the new gas-fired heating systems supply pure, warm air without attention or bother. There is no need of going into the basement. A little electrical control upstairs automatically takes care of the furnace.

So buy a good gas-fired furnace. Have it installed correctly. For that means long years of economical operation. But remember—there's little economy in a cheap furnace installation. So talk to our gas heating specialist first, for he'll gladly advise you about specifications that insure economical and efficient gas heating.

CHAPTER I

By

Copyright by Dodd, Mead & Co.
WNU Service

He did not know whether to be more amused or irritated at her temerity, not to say impudence, in keeping him waiting. He glanced at his wrist watch. Ten minutes past the time for their rendezvous and he had been here five minutes ahead of time. Waiting fifteen minutes—for a common little Pennsylvania Dutch girl! Really, she must be taught better. He would have to give her a lesson.

Hitherto it had been he who had kept her waiting here at their trysting place. Deliberately. To keep her in her place. Lest she get it into her head that he wanted to marry her! Any girl might expect anything these days—all social barriers falling, no lines drawn—

She was not, as yet, spoiled. She had never presumed to resent his keeping her waiting. Regarded him with awe. Demure little thing she was—

He considered how he should impress upon her the seriousness of the fact that she had displeased him. Go home and not be here when she did finally get here after walking three miles to meet him? No, he couldn't be quite so ruthless as that. Anyway, she would just think he had failed to keep their rendezvous and would not know he had been here and had gone away again.

Leave a note pinned to the tree? Not safe. Even if he did not sign his name. Commit yourself to writing and you're apt to have a lawsuit for damages or "heart balm" on your hands. Above all things he must avoid a scandal—just now especially—on the eve of becoming engaged—

Well, one thing was certain, she must not know he had been so eager as to have gotten here ages ahead of her and so forbearing as to have waited all this time. He'd hide and not appear until after she arrived.

Picking his way to avoid mud, he descended the hill on the slope opposite the one she would ascend.

He found himself surprised that he should be taking all this trouble for a little country girl. Unprecedented in his experience. Never, even for one of his own class, had he put himself out and he was nothing if not a stickler for "class" in these days of falling barriers. First time in his life he had ever been so tired by a girl of low breeding. A Pennsylvania Dutch farmer's daughter who talked the lingo—heavens! How on earth was it that he, usually too pernickety-nice, he admitted it, found the vulgar little thing so irresistible?

Ah, but the fact was she wasn't vulgar, really; only unsophisticated. If she were inherently vulgar, the gum-chewing type, he would not be here. No, not for all the seduction of that white throat so tantalizingly exposed when she bent back her head and laughed; and that unutterable sweetness of her lips; and the dazzling whiteness and evenness of her teeth; and that musical little gurgle when anything amused her. (And such unexpected things did amuse her, like his correcting her English and her manners.)

She puzzled him a little; had from the first; he did not "get" her exactly; something there was about her—it could not be subtlety, she was too simple. But he vaguely sensed that she was not quite so simple as she seemed; vaguely distrusted her; she did, sometimes, with an innocence that was almost suspiciously stupid, say such pointed things; things that did prick beneath the skin a little.

Youthfully priding himself upon his extreme modernism, and upon being a disciple of French decadent critics of art and life, he believed that he. In common with all the new generation who did any thinking, had rejected all religion. But the truth was that in the face of the wreckage of faiths all over the landscape, he did most tenaciously and devoutly cling to the faith of his fathers—their deeply religious faith in the respectability of the Creighton family and its divine right to special prerogatives—the prerogatives naturally inherent in owners of anthracite coal mines.

St. Croix Creighton was glad that he looked much more like a man of letters than a man of business. He cultivated that "literary" look he thought he had; and he did have a good deal to go on—clear-cut features, cold, thoughtful eyes, a rather Byronic head.

Had he not been so well placed in life as always to command consideration, he would hardly have "got by" so smoothly as he did with his little assumptions of superiority and his little affectations. But as no one of his world had ever had the temerity to consider him ridiculous, he did not know he was. To be sure, there was his elder brother, Marvin, who sometimes waxed sarcastic at his expense—but Marvin, in the judgment of his own class, was not a person to be taken seriously, for the obvious reason that he did not take himself nor his great position in the world nor yet the Creighton family itself seriously.

All this is, however, digressing—we have left our young gentleman standing uncomfortably and perilously on the muddy slope of a hill, taking in the view.

and all he had been able to elicit from her had been, "The vee-you? Yes, it's nice." A "nice" view! So of course, far from feeling the ugliness of her father's farmhouse, she was probably proud of its fresh paint and generally well-to-do aspect.

From where he stood St. Croix could plainly see, five miles to the right of the Schwencktons' farm, his own home, rising from a hilltop, overlooking a wide area: the imposing estate, "Beechlands," that for two generations had been the home of the powerful Creighton family, visible from all points of the compass for many miles. And in the valley at the foot of their hill clustered the monotonous rows of ugly little houses in which the men and children lived who worked in the Creighton coal mines, creating the wealth which maintained the mansion on the hilltop, and at the same time, under a wise and beneficent Providence, earning their own subsistence, however bare and joyless—such was Nature's divinely ordained plan, the Creightons had always reverently and devoutly believed, and no religious believers had ever lived up to a creed more faithfully and consistently.

St. Croix Creighton Was Glad That He Looked Much More a Man of Letters Than a Man of Business.

Our young heir to the great Creighton estate, as he started on his way back to the appointed meeting place, decided that if Meely (that was her silly name—"Meely") were not there this time he would certainly go home.

"And," he told himself as he lit a cigarette and began his second ascent of the hill, "if I do go home without seeing her, she'll surely pay the piper!—if I don't decide to drop her altogether!"

He had an uneasy suspicion that this latter course would not hurt her nearly so much as it would fret him—though it had been she that had made the first advances in their intimacy; at a barn dance in the neighborhood of his home; outraging the rural conventions in her determination to attract his attention by boldly executing a dance solo down the length of the barn, stopping before him with a deep curtsy and holding out her lovely arms in invitation—after which he had danced with no one else during the remainder of the evening.

She had tried that evening to pin him down to a date for their next meeting, but though he had fully intended to meet her again, he had kept her in suspense; not only for that evening, but for two weeks following. Uncertainty—that was the weapon for winning and holding a girl.

He had confidently expected her to try to seek him out. But when a whole week had passed without a sign from her, he had begun to grow restless. Each succeeding day and night that he waited grew longer, intolerably longer, and he had finally realized, with an ironical amusement at his own expense, that all the "uncertainty" he had meant to inflict upon her, he himself was enduring with a poignancy that astonished and angered him. A little hussy like that, a peasant girl, play fast and loose with him, causing him sleepless nights, hungry yearnings to see her again and hold her, fresh and fragrant young beauty that she was, in his arms again, as he had ecstatically done at the barn dance!

But the trouble had been that he did not know where she lived nor even her name. So sure had he been that he would hear from her in a day or two that he had not taken the trouble to ascertain these unimportant facts about her.

It had been only when, quite beaten, he had been about to give in and try to discover her that he had received from her a funny, crude little note. What sport he had at his club showing it around for the enjoyment of his fellow club members!

"Since you are the only Gentleman Friend I got that's a perfect Gentleman in whom I feel I know well enough to ask for such a favor, dear, I am asking you, now, to keep company with me and be my Steady Date."

That was a month ago and he had been seeing her several times a week, furtively, ever since; his "ridiculous infatuation," as he scornfully called it to himself, growing more irresistible with each meeting.

As he reached the top of the hill he was greatly relieved (and thrilled) to see her sitting there under the tree which was their appointed meeting place.

At sight of him she threw away the apple she had been eating with greedy abandon, drew the back of her hand across her mouth and hastily rose.

His peculiar sort of egotism derived an almost sensual pleasure from this girl's worshipful bearing toward him, from her timid admiration of everything about him, which she so helplessly betrayed—of his modish clothes, his finely shaped white hands, his cultivated speech, even his faintly supercilious and autocratic attitude toward herself.

She came toward him, just now, shyly, rubbing her soiled right hand on her hip before offering it to him.

But he waved it off, and resisting, with a strong self-restraint, the tenderness as well as the desire to which she powerfully moved him, he looked down upon her severely as she stood before him.

"Go and sit down again." She obeyed him like a child, her soft brown eyes fixed upon his face with a doglike anxious uncertainty that acted on his passion for dominance like a titillating stimulant.

She wore a cheap, dressy frock of blue voile trimmed with tawdry white lace, a bunch of artificial flowers on one shoulder, streamers of flimsy blue ribbon at the waist.

He frowned at the slovenly way she sat and she quickly straightened up, pulled her skirt over her knees and tried to look prim.

Spreading his handkerchief on a flat rock a few feet in front of her, he sat down, clasped his shapely hands about his knees and silently, disapprovingly, inspected her. She became uneasy, making a timid, tentative movement to come closer to him, evidently as eager as he was (though less controlled) to begin their "petting party," as she most vulgarly called it. But again he waved her on.

"Not yet," he said curtly. He always held her off in suspense like this for a little while, partly to impress her with a proper sense of her inferiority, partly to prolong the stimulating contemplation of her charms and of her subservience, so that when he did presently permit her to come to him, the nearness of her beauty would be all the more thrilling.

She relaxed against the tree, her pretty head drooping, an adorably childish pout on her red lips. "I'm sure I don't know what I done!" she said in an injured tone, on the verge of tears.

"Did. Say did." "What I've did," she meekly repeated.

"Oh!" he sighed, "you hopeless child! Didn't they teach you any English grammar at the district school down there?"—with an inclination of his head toward the valley.

"Well, you see, till I was twelve years old I already, Pop he wouldn't do it to leave me to go to school no more. So I ain't just so good educated that way, like you, Mr. Creighton. You're got an awful nice education—ain't you have? And," she added, drawing a deep breath, "you become your clo'es so! Ah!" She was given to lumping unrelated facts in this way.

"Star-Spangled Banner" Finished in Rowboat

The last lines of "The Star-Spangled Banner" were written in a rowboat by Francis Scott Key and were not penned in the hold of a prison ship as the old school books taught.

Legendary history was that Key was a prisoner of war while watching the British bombardment of Baltimore and Fort M'Henry during the war of 1812. The correct story has been brought to light by the Woman's Home Companion, which shows that Key was permitted to go to the British flagship under a truce signal to obtain the release of a friend who had been taken prisoner, and arrived just as the enemy was ready to open fire.

The young poet developed his verses during the anxiety of the night, but it was while returning to shore in a small boat the following morning that he wrote exultantly "Tis the Star-Spangled Banner. Oh! long may it wave o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

Got Through, All Right

Recently there visited in this city a genuine old Georgia "cracker" from the outlying piney woods section of that state. While here he attended for the first time in his life an Episcopal church service. Later he remarked to a friend:

"It was all as interestin' as a 'possum hunt. I never did know much o' what all the folks about me was a-do-in', but I jest kept my wits about me an' fell an' riz with 'em every time."—Boston Globe.

JULIA'S VERY BUSY HOLIDAY

(By D. J. Walsh.)

JULIA SHAW sat in the bay window enjoying the sunshine that poured in over the pots of geranium and begonia on the low sill. She was having a half-holiday at home and it seemed unreal and delightful to be sitting quiet with a book instead of standing behind the counter in the store where she worked six days of every seven.

The sunshine turned her brown hair to gold and warmed into color the pale ovals of her young cheeks. Frequently she glanced from the printed page to the street, where the snow was thinning under the first thaws. From the adjoining house, an old woman came forth wearing a cape and hat, with a market basket in her hand. Julia started.

"Mrs. Wilcox has forgotten to take off her kitchen apron," she thought. Springing up, she pulled a sash down from the top and called over it. "Mrs. Wilcox! Haven't you forgotten something?"

The old woman glanced up, glanced down and comprehended. Her withered cheek flushed.

"Land sakes! My apron—I I'm ever so much obliged, child." She snatched off the apron, tucked it into her basket and continued on her way.

Julia closed the window and resumed her seat. A moment later the tap of a cane on the bare sidewalk made her look up again. It was old Mr. Pell on his way to the corner grocery. He paused, shook his head and appeared to be in troubled thought. Seeing the girl in the familiar window, he smiled.

Again Julia lowered the window. "Anything I can do, Mr. Pell?" she asked brightly.

"Yes, Julia. You can tell me what I'm going after. It's out of my head quick as this. And I hate to go clean back home. Something Nancy wants, she's—baking—"

Julia named half a dozen articles. No, it was none of those. She began again and he interrupted her with a little shout of triumph. "That's it—molasses!" And went cheerfully on his way.

There was the sound of an opening door and a woman leading a child by the hand entered. She was Mrs. Gage, the young matron who lived in the pretty bungalow three doors farther down the street.

"All alone, Julia? Where's your mother?" she began.

"Gone to the sewing club," Julia answered.

"I wonder if you won't look after Edward a little while. I want to go over to Alice Bates' a moment. Edward's always so restless when he goes there—I'll hurry back just as soon as I can," promised Mrs. Gage.

Julia tried to smile. She knew very well what she was in for if she accepted Edward as a charge. Edward was a handful. Besides, his mother, relieved of his presence, would spend the remainder of the afternoon playing cards with her bosom friend. Yet much as she hated to destroy the peace of her much-needed half-holiday, she could not say no to a neighbor.

"I've brought his choo-choo along. I guess he'll play contented with that," Mrs. Gage said as she skipped blithely away.

Julia eyed the choo-choo doubtfully. She knew how Edward used it at home. And she was not disappointed in her surprise that he would do the same away from home when he mounted the wheeled toy and rode it full tilt into a door. White paint flew. In dismay Julia ran to intercept him, but he careened round the table at full speed.

To woo him away from the destructive choo-choo was now Julia's design. But she failed. She offered an apple, a cookie, but Edward continued his course. When she attempted to take him from the thing he shrieked. She was reduced to despair, for Mr. Winn was in his room overhead, and at that hour he was studying hard and must not be disturbed.

Mr. Winn was Mrs. Shaw's last roomer. The others had gone with the closing of the factory. Mr. Winn had stayed on unaccountably. He seemed to be studying something. And the money he paid for his room was very welcome in that house where Julia's salary was the sole mainstay.

A light tap sounded and Julia opened the living room door. Mr. Winn stood there. He was slender, good looking, with serious dark eyes.

"Is—are you having any trouble of any kind?" he asked.

"I'm so sorry," breathed Julia. "I know he's making an awful racket, but—I can't stop him. You see, he's mad at me now, and—I'm afraid I can't do a thing with him."

Mr. Winn stepped into the room. He stood looking down upon the howling Edward.

"Hello!" he said quietly. "What's all this about?"

At the sound of his voice Edward shut his mouth and opened his eyes. Here was a recognizable male. Besides his ear caught the note of authority in the deeper voice.

"This steed of yours," said Mr. Winn, "hasn't any business to knock the paint off Miss Shaw's doors, you know, or batter her furniture. In other words he must be shut out to behave. Otherwise he'll be shut out on the porch where it's cold."

Edward looked up at Mr. Winn. He understood.

"Dicky'll be good," he said cheerfully. He turned Dicky into a convenient stall, parked him, alighted and came to Mr. Winn. "I want to sit on your lap," he said.

Mr. Winn sat down and took Edward on his knee. Edward begged for stories; Mr. Winn told them.

"I don't see how you do it," Julia murmured.

He smiled at her. "You were the only child, weren't you? Well, I was one of eight and the oldest. I had to help bring up the last four." He went on to tell her about his home life, how his father died and he had to "take hold," till the younger children had a start. How, for a year now, they had all been doing fine, and he had come here and taken an easy job to enable him to finish the course he was studying.

"I'm all ready for my civil service exam now," he said proudly.

He was interrupted by the entrance of old Mrs. Wilcox. She had come to bring Julia a quarter section of chocolate layer cake.

"If it hadn't been for you I'd have worn that checked gingham apron down the street. I'd never hear the last of it," she said.

A few moments later Mr. Pell knocked at the back door. He had a plate of Lucy's molasses cookies.

"I told her how I'd have clean forgot what I was sent for if you hadn't told me," he said cheerfully.

Julia felt that Mr. Winn must share in these gifts. She had an idea that a bit of good food would be acceptable to him. So she made a pot of tea, added some of her mother's bread and invited him to partake. The three of them made merry together, for Edward, with Mr. Winn as his monitor, behaved like an angel.

Mrs. Shaw came home before the tea party was over.

"It's been the nicest afternoon, mother," Julia told her mother when they were alone. "I like Mr. Winn very much."

"He seems a fine young man," Mrs. Shaw replied. "We shall miss him when he goes away."

"He isn't going away," Julia said with a slight blush. "You see, his mother has married again and his younger brothers and sisters are all doing for themselves. So there is really no reason for his going home except for an occasional visit. Of course, after he passes his examinations his work will be here, so—"

Mrs. Shaw drew a long breath. She had seen for some time that Mr. Winn was interested in her daughter, but, being a wise mother, she would let Julia's love affair come to its happy conclusion without her interference.

Lure of South Seas Prevails in Hawaii

Sharp contrasts meet in Hawaii. Twentieth century flying machines stand out against the background of primitive customs, of which the lei is perhaps the most picturesque.

"Aloha!" is the smiling greeting of the Hawaiian as he garlands the visitor with fragrant leis of frangipani, plumeria and sweet-smelling malle vine. "Aloha oe" ("My love to you") is the last poignant refrain played by the Royal Hawaiian band as the ship sails away. The last memories of Hawaii are the perfume-drenched flower leis with which the returning visitor is decked. Fragrant flower leis are hung round his neck and round his hat. They drape his arms. The lei holds within its perfumed blossoms the essence of Aloha—the love-gift of the islands and all the lure of the South seas.

Not only the visitor, but nearly every one in the islands as well wears leis made of flowers, of feathers, of the scarlet seeds of the willow tree or the polished black kukui nuts. Hats are decked with leis of sweet white ginger blossoms or have flat bathrings of yellow, scarlet or gray iridescent feathers.

Along the streets in Honolulu, on the docks, in the market, rows of native flower-women sit on the ground, baskets before them heaped with fragrant leis. Their broad-brimmed native hats are garlanded with blossoms and there are flower wreaths about their necks.

Wreaths of scarlet seeds and berries of polished black kukui nuts or glistening brown pandanus, of rare white shells from the outlying islands or the tree-shells found on high mountain trails adorn the dresses of the girls who take the rainbow trail up green Manoa valley or stroll under the tall trees.—New York Times.

Rare Bible Editions

Some of the rarest Bibles in existence are among the collection on display at Baker university, Baldwin, Kan. The remarkable collection was left the institution by the late Bishop William A. Quayle of the Methodist Episcopal church, graduate and one-time president of the university. More than 225 rare editions, ranging in size from a very minute copy to the Synagoga Roll or Tora, which is made from the skins of 37 animals and is 100 feet in length, are in the group. The oldest Bible in the collection is a Latin manuscript of 1225.

'Andy Andy

He entered the office, bat in hand. "I've come in answer to your advertisement for a 'andy man,'" he informed the manager.

The latter looked him over. "Well, what are your qualifications?" he asked at length.

"Just that I'm very 'andy, sir," replied the man. "I lives next door to 'ere."

Velvet Is Leader in Fashion Field

Material Used in Almost Every Item of Milady's Outer Wardrobe.

Velvet, most regal of fabrics and long favored by kings, reigns supreme this season in the field of fashion. Knowing that velvet possesses a rich depth of color and an exquisiteness of texture to be found in no other material, the smart woman hopes each fall that this flattering fabric will find favor with those who set the fashions.

This season she has not hoped in vain for velvet enjoys a fashion prestige that extends to almost every item of a woman's outer wardrobe.

The new velvets usually called transparent or georgette, possess a sheerness that enables them to be draped and shirred and even tucked without becoming bulky. And so it is that many velvet dresses remain slim at the same time that they take on very graceful lines and an air of femininity through the use of tiers, jabots, shirred tunics, side draperies and crushed girdles.

The all-velvet dinner frock is very elegant, but for afternoon occasions many women choose frocks of crepe satin with velvet introduced in a tunic or in bandings around the neck, sleeves and hem. Another stunning dress combines a blouse of metal embroidered georgette with a circular skirt of velvet.

A black velvet skirt with the blouse of yellow embroidered in gold, or blue embroidered in silver makes a charming costume appropriate for any informal occasion. A brown velvet skirt with a blouse of beige is equally good looking and follows the present vogue for the brown shades. Among printed velvets the polka-dot pattern is smart and makes some very delightful afternoon dresses.

Velvet in hats as well as in dresses is frequently smartest when combined with some fabric, and it is when combined with felt that the velvet hat is most appropriate for wear with wool frock or tweed coat. Dressier afternoon models combine velvet with soleil and while the all-black hat is seen in the greatest numbers there is a vogue for combining colors as well as fabrics. Blue and black, brown and beige, and two shades of green are seen but these are only worn with costumes in the same color combinations.

Stitched velvets in vagabond shapes go well with outdoor clothes and are often chosen by the college girl and those who follow her lead in the matter of dress.

Brilliant hats of the off-the-face styles that are good in all hats find many of their smartest versions in velvet. To wear with frocks of velvet or satin one may well choose a small all-velvet draped turban. Another version, particularly youthful, is the tam draped velvet.

Charming Touches Added to Gown by Frill, Belt

Displaying a recent model for fall and winter wear; the frill and belt are considered especially good; the gown is shown in a pretty striped crepe, but would be equally fetching in other material.

Laurel Leaves Used in Heavy Gold Necklace

Laurel leaves in heavy gold plate are joined together in a new necklace that fits about the base of the neck. Imitation jade makes an attractive-looking brooch that is worn in front, while a concealed clasp is used in the back for opening. In addition to this necklace are new versions of the cobra jewelry. This type of necklace is now made in square finishes and in new 60-inch lengths, in open and closed strands. One particularly good-looking necklace is composed of four strands, one each of silver, gold, steel and bronze, all wound in together. The square chains with open ends are made in one and two strands, but instead of being knotted together are invisibly joined to form a pendant effect.

Brazelets embodying the same idea in combining one or more metals are made in one and two-inch widths of small match-like sections, but rounded in surface. They are also made in a silver and gold combination, or all silver and all gold. Crystal swords with silver handles set with small jewels and marcasite make very fashionable dress pins for wear on the new corduroy ensembles or on any of the new felt hats.

Mufflers and Scarfs

Chic for Street Wear

Many novelties in scarfs are appearing from time to time. For street wear the Rodier cashmere mufflers and scarfs are the most attractive in the fashion market. They are woven of zephyr-like wool, with threads of silk that make the lustrous pattern of the surface. They are indescribably beautiful and are like thistledown to the touch, in artistic combinations of blue, soft green, beige and gray, with the contrast delicately shaded to resemble dew on spider webs. Larger and heavier scarfs of the Rodier weave are suitable for street and sports wear during the fall and winter, taking somewhat the place of furs. Some of these are in plain colors, some mixed, and many are in striking patterns of plaids, stripes and geometric figures. The original Deauville scarf, which is a square kerchief, is still shown in lovely colors, in silk of surah type and heavy crepe.

Velveteen Compromise if Velvet Is Not Used

Women are reluctant to leave velvet out of any part of the fashion picture, but knowing it to be unsuitable for those most practical frocks and coats that are a part of the busy woman's wardrobe they compromise on velveteen. For costumes that must combine serviceability with smartness, velveteen is the ideal fashionable fabric. The business woman, for instance, chooses a velveteen ensemble which combines a slim tailored coat and skirt of velveteen with a jumper of jersey.

Printed velveteen in plaid and modernistic designs often makes the jacket of a jaunty all-around dress whose plain velveteen skirt repeats one of the colors in the blouse.

Softer Neckline Used in New Winter Dresses

More flattering to the older, or thin woman than last season's severe style, are the softened necklines Paris dressmakers are using for winter models. Touches of lace, narrow collars, soft drapery and scarf effects on many models of importance make it possible to get away from the trying untrussed necks without acknowledging defeat. Chanel uses many turn-back collars. High collars are sponsored by Doucet, Redfern and others whose authority is unquestionable.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

MORE MAGIC

At last Clocky awoke and came over to the house. It was a sad looking household. The house seemed so empty and the odd things they had brought with them only gave it a queer, make-shift look. They were all sitting around not knowing quite what to do. Ada felt most uncomfortable.

"Have you any more magic left, Clocky?" she asked.

"I have," said Clocky brightly.

"Oh, Clocky, then would you mind, most fearfully, going home once again tonight to ask Grandma if she couldn't possibly come? Mother might spare her, and as Mr. Todd says it's not going to stop raining I don't know what we will do if she doesn't come."

She thought to herself how wonderful, too, Grandma was when Crystal cried.

Ada couldn't bear to see Crystal cry. It made her want to cry herself and that she could never do. She was too old for that. Besides Teddy was so proud of her because she could really get terrible bumps and have all sorts of accidents and still not cry.

So once more they all told Clocky of other things they wanted—all except Peter Murray and Mrs. Cackle and the lame chicken, Nip.

Saucy Susy was lying quite happily out in the rain, under a tree. She did not seem to want anything.

Ada almost wished she could be a cow. A cow never seemed to think ahead as to whether there would be fun or fair weather or a good time. Besides giving milk there was lots to be said in favor of being a cow.

"I don't suppose you could bring a few beds, could you?" asked Ada of Clocky.

"And some more pillows?" asked Teddy's friends.

"And my teeth," suggested Cooky.

"What about Mr. Applecore?" suggested Teddy.

Mr. Applecore's real name was Mr.

Appledore, but Ada had named him Mr. Applecore when she was a little girl and they had always called him by this name.

He had a candy store at the edge of the village, not far from Ada's home.

"I should think Mr. Applecore would like it here," Jerry added. "He's always saying he never can take a day off because the children won't let him."

"Ask him to bring the hard candies and the little round sweet biscuits with the coconut frosting," Jim added.

"You'd better bring our toy banks," Teddy said, "as Mr. Applecore never trusts anyone, least of all any of us."

"I have 'leven pennies in my bank," boasted Crystal.

"Maybe you'd better bring some more of our friends," Ada asked.

"Mr. Applecore mightn't think we were enough. And they'd have to bring their banks, too."

"And please, please, bring Grandma."

"Bring Grandma," the others all urged.

It was still raining when Clocky went away. And that night, just before Crystal was put to bed, she almost cried again, for she wished she could have a bath in which to splash and her toy lobster and frog who always floated on the water of her bath.

Of course Angelina Adorable never had to take a bath, but even she looked as though she thought any mention of anything at home was lovely. Ada could tell that from her expression.

Perhaps they would return home.

In Praise of Youth

Orville Wright, praising Charles A. Lindbergh at a dinner in Dayton, said:

"Only a young man could have achieved this feat. For youth is braver than age. It is more generous, too, more honorable. Yes, it's better all around."

The great airman smiled rather sadly.

"The good don't really die young," he said. "They outgrow it."

A Woman's Age

"May is at least twenty-five years old."

"She never told you, did she?"

"Not exactly, but she said a girl shouldn't marry before she's twenty-six."

If Kidneys Act Bad Take Salts

Says Backache Often Means You Have Not Been Drinking Enough Water

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of soft water.

MUTUAL STORE ROBBED

Last Sunday evening at about 7:30 two men entered the Mutual Store, at 6073 Mission street, after cutting the telephone wires, and got away with the contents of the cash register. Mrs. M. Gillotti, the manager, and Miss Olga Peterson, a clerk, were in the store at the time. They were ordered to go into the back room while the robbers opened the register. Mrs. Gillotti refused to leave the room, however, and watched the men at their work, giving the alarm as soon as they had left the building, but not in time to effect their capture. It is expected they will be in the hands of the police in a few days.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

By H. H.

VOLUME I FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1927 NUMBER 16

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

We overheard this at the post office:
Lady: "Isn't it just terrible, I've taught my pet poodle everything I know, and he's still dumb."

"STERLING" Wall Board, the wall board of satisfaction.

It isn't how good looking you are when you smile, it's how sincere you are.

Radio Fans
"Tune in" on this newspaper and get the latest about Building Materials.

Modern Shopper:
"Have you anything snappy in rubber bands?"

Assistant: "No; but we have something catchy in fly-paper."

Gentleman: "Are you sure this room is quiet?"
Landlady: "Quiet? Why it never makes a sound."

If you are planning to "Build or Repair," see us for lumber and shingles.

Bobby: "Father, is it correct to say that a storm is brewing?"
Colonel: "No, my son; it never rains anything but water."

"ABERDEEN" the coal that satisfies.

First Father: "Your son beat up my son, who is smaller. You should lecture him for hitting a smaller boy."

Second Father: "I think you are quite wrong. Your son needs to be told not to sass a bigger boy."

EVERYTHING in Builders' Hardware.

"I'll give you just three days to pay your rent."
"Allright, I'll take Fourth if July, Christmas and Easter."

Bob: "Miss Marian—or—Marian, I mean, I've known you long enough to drop the 'Miss,' haven't I?"

Marian: "Yes, I think you have. What prefix do you wish to substitute?"

Wealthy Parent: "What is your prospect if you marry my daughter?"

"Poor Sutor: 'Excellent, if I marry your daughter, sir.'"
